

Innovation at work

'Innovation' (creating our future); a poem by Richard Blayden

The complete poem is presented at the end of the pictures

'Nature's innovation. Pictures by Paul White

Innovation at work

'Innovation' (creating our future). A poem by Richard Blayden*

The complete poem is presented at the end of the book.

'Nature's innovation at work'. Pictures by Paul White*

Richard Blayden and Paul White share thoughts on innovation at the web site;

www.corporateinnovationonline.com

Rosseau River Muskoka Ontario Canada

Spring Runoff

Our world is driven by constant change
Because we love to re-arrange

The way we work and rest and play
To make things better in every way

It's a challenge, it's fun, the rewards are great,
It's never too late to innovate.

Joe public's hungry for all the joys
Of new-fangled toys for girls and boys

For labour saving, clever devices
That make life easy, at low low prices

And entertainment, well that's a must
For novelty, the producers we trust.

We measure progress by what's out-of-date
And reminisce for what, of late

Was yesterday's new great invention
But now is junk, by all intention

It's old, it's used, it's lost its charm
But hopefully, it's done no harm

And for each and every great invention
We marvel at the inspiration

The maker's dream, an intriguing thing
Then making it real, into our lives to bring

Another step in our lifelong quest
To stay ahead of all the rest

And as rapid change accelerates
We seek to build and accommodate

A faster rate of thinking new
And working smarter, a winning crew

That leads the way in tomorrow's world
As tomorrow's gismo's are unfurled

Innovation's good, makes profits too
It's the key to growth for me and you

There's so much good already done
Much more to come, let's make it fun

But alas, some things we can't undo
Without some risk, dreams never come true.

Innovation (creating our future)

Our world is driven by constant change
Because we love to re-arrange
The way we work and rest and play
To make things better in every way
It's a challenge, it's fun, the rewards are great,
It's never too late to innovate.
Joe public's hungry for all the joys
Of new-fangled toys for girls and boys
For labour saving, clever devices
That make life easy, at low low prices
And entertainment, well that's a must
For novelty, the producers we trust.
We measure progress by what's out-of-date
And reminisce for what, of late
Was yesterday's new great invention
But now is junk, by all intention
It's old, it's used, it's lost its charm
But hopefully, it's done no harm

And for each and every great invention
We marvel at the inspiration
The maker's dream, an intriguing thing
Then making it real, into our lives to bring
Another step in our lifelong quest
To stay ahead of all the rest
And as rapid change accelerates
We seek to build and accommodate
A faster rate of thinking new
And working smarter, a winning crew
That leads the way in tomorrow's world
As tomorrow's gismo's are unfurled
Innovation's good, makes profits too
It's the key to growth for me and you
There's so much good already done
Much more to come, let's make it fun
But alas, some things we can't undo
Without some risk, dreams never come true.

A poem by Richard Blayden

The World at Peace

